NEW YORK HERALD, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1862.-TRIPLE

JULY ATTUS

it worth while to get two additional stars inserted. In fact, when the battle was fought at Fort Donelson, Missouri and Kentucky were both virtually out of the confederacy again, and the number of stars in the rebel flag is, refore, more accurate that in the inaugural address of the rebel President. Altogether, it is a handsome trophy, and it seems to be a pity that it should have graced so bad a cause. It is still the Confederate national flag, though a different one has been devised for the battle

In a speech at a dinner given to Beauregard subsequently to the battle of Manassas, that general said he would never fight again under a lag of this kind. He ought never to have fought under it at all. He said it was too like the flag of the United States, and that it gave rise to some serious mistakes at Bull run. It appears, however, that the mistakes were about equal on both sides, and even in this last battle a Kentucky Union regiment fired a volley into two Illinois regiments causing great panie-a mistake which would perhaps, have been avoided had the distinction between the two hostile flags been more marked. The new flag of the Confederate army is a blue Union, with four stars and a red ground, the bars intersecting each other, not at right angles, but diagonally. We suppose the forces at Fort Donelson had not obtained a supply of the new article. But in a short time there will be no necessity for it, or for any but the old flag of the Union for by the Fourth of July the "Star Spangled Banner," which heretofore has waved over "the land of the free and the home of the brave." will be the only emblem of nationality known in the Southern States, from the Ohio and the Potomac to the Rio Grande

· To WHOM IS DUE THE MERIT OF THE LATE VIC-TORIES?-Mr. Roscoe L. Conkling, of New York. moved the following resolution in the House of Representatives on Monday last:-

Received, By the Senate and House of Representatives, that the thanks of Congress are due and are hereby presented to Major Generals Halleck and Grant for planning the recent movements within their respective divisions, and to both these generals, as well as to the officers and men under their command, for achieving the glorious victories in which these movements resulted.

This resolution was very properly referred.

to the Committee on Military Affairs, for its mover was by no means in a position to determine who "planned the recent movements." There were other men, perhaps, who had more to do with the planning than Halleck or Grant. What is due to both, is: the execution to Grant. for his conduct in the field, and to Halleck for organizing and directing the advance. But how far either of them planned the strategy of the movements up the Tennessee and Cumberland, is, we presume, a matter entirely beyond the knowledge of Mr. Conkling. He evidently does not know much about generalship or mili. tary affairs, and the less he says on the subject the better. Taking his observations on the resolution, in connection with the resolution itself. It is very plain that the design is not so much to praise Halleck and Grant as to wound Gen. McClellan, the Commander-in-Chief; and praise to brave and skilful generals like Halleck and Grant, at the expense of General McClellan, must be extremely distasteful. Mr. Conkling says:-"Those movements did not originate in Washington"-"the victories have not been organized by any one sitting in a room." The reference to the General-in-Chief is evident. Now, we ask Mr. Conkling to inform us how he knows that the movements did not originate in Washington, and that the victories were not organized by any one sitting in a room? It is generally by somebody sitting in a room that our victories are organized, and why the person who originated those recent movements may not have sat in a room in Washington and there organized them is more than Mr. Conkling onn prove.

One of our abolition contemporaries gives the whole credit of planning this part of the apaign to General Buell, and pronounces it a deviation from the plan of General Scott, and as being accepted by Genera McClellan when offered by General Buell' Another journal insists that the plan is entirely, from the very beginning, General McClellan's, and was presented by him to the President several months ago; and that General Buell is no general at all, and has subjected himself to the severest condemnation for permitting Johnston to escape from Bowling Green. There are other claimants for the honor, and we have no doubt their tame is legion, and that they would constitute a very large army. We have received a letter from a correspondent claiming the credit of the Burnside expedition, and we perceive that the correspondent of another journal actually produces proofs that to him is due the inspiration of General Buell and the salvation of the Union. What a ridiculous farce!

THE WRETCHED STATE OF THE STREETS .- A few days ago the condition of our streets was such that the public traffic was more or less impeded at all points, and the mere act of cross ing a thoroughfare such as Broadway was an enterprise full of danger and discomfort. It was with the greatest difficulty that the tide of traffic forced its way through the great arteries of the city. Banks of solid ice, bills of spow. and piles of ashes, roce above the waste of slush through which we were compelled to wade, often ankle deep. The result was that mer stumbled, and carts and omnibuses came into collision at every few yards, and everything out of doors was hopelessly at the mercy of

Then, when the frost came, a few miserable looking men were set to work breaking the frozen debris into pieces, which they threw-in in the shape of huge, hard boulders-into the middle of the streets, to the great damage of every horse that passed by. They were a day or two too late in the field to do any good and, in order to avoid doing harm, they ought to have waited for a thaw before they commenced such operations. The street contractor is a wonder. He does nothing right at the proper time, and he does some curious things when it would be better to leave them alone. The consequence is that the streets are never cleaned according to contract

We, however, perceive that the contractor is infusing a little activity into his operations, and if he begins to work in earnest the city will soon be relieved from the disgrace of being the dirtiest in the country. He will also save himself from the severe consequences which a consinued neglect of the performance of a stipulated duty would have been certain to pro Toke. We counsel the Street Cleaning Com mittee to superintend him vigilantly, and insist upon the terms of the contract being honestly ried out, and to exact a proper pecuniary Poffeit whenever he fails in any particular.

THE RELEASE OF PRISONERS .- When the num er of prisoners in the possession of the North and South was about equal the Confederate government made certain of our officers in their custody draw lots to decide which among them should be shot in the event of any of the Southern privateersmen at the North being executed, and they held this threat over our heads. But when the number of rebel prisoners run up to fifteen thousand, as it did after the battles at Ponelson and Roanoke, the rebel authorities suddenly found that it cost in Richmond alone two thousand dollars in Southern shinplasters a day to feed the Union prisoners; that, therefore, they not only resolved to release those in the rebel capital, but throughout the whole South, trusting to the magnanimity of the North to liberate as many of the rebels. This was done in due course; but, amusing enough, many of the prisoners about whose lives they have manifested so much concern, when their release was offered to them, made a formal representation that if they were restored to liberty on condition of being sent back to the South the would rather remain in the jail at Philadelphia where they had been confined. Contrast this with the avidity with which the Union prisoners embraced the opportunity of returning to their Northern homes. The sense of exultation they experienced when the time came was very different to the miserable feeling of those who had been impressed as privateersmen into the rebel Service, and who dreaded a return to the insurgent States. Thousands of homes in our midst are now gladdened by the presence of those who but a few days ago were the tenants of Southern dungeons and cattle sheds, and many of these, with undiminished patriotism, have sought readmission to the grand army of the TORMENTS OF THE ABOLITION TANTALUS. Poor Greelev's troubles are never ending. He has been misrepresenting and villifying General McClellan for several weeks back, with a view to having him replaced by some other general whose conservative tendencies were not supposed to be as decided. One by one all those towards whom he has inclined have disappointed his expectations; and now-the bitterest blow of all-General Halleck, on whom he relied as a sure card to supplant McClellan, has just issued a military order which places him in as strong antagonism to his emancipation theories as the latter. General Halleck will neither admit fugitive slaves within his lines nor will be countenance their concealment in any way by his troops. Poor Greeley! The further the war progresses the more remote becomes the realization of the fanatical hopes that led him and the faction with which he is connected to provoke it.

EXTERPRISING, VERY. Some of our conten poraries have been recently boasting of getting about of the Herald in matters of news. If they have succeeded in doing so, neither we nor the public are conscious of it. We would recommend the journals that are thus belauding themselves to make a fresh comparison of notes with our issue of yesterday. They will there find that we publish, in advance of them the account of Jeff. Davis' inauguration at Rich mond, with his inaugural address; all the latest news from Ship Island; a complete list of the prisoners just released by the rebels, and all the rebel accounts relating to the evacuation of Nashville.

WINTER GARDEN.
"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was produced here last night with great success. Mr. C. Walcot sustained the cha-racter of Uncle Tom with admirable care and precision. Mr. Barton Hill that of Simon Legree, the stave trader, with his usual hardness of manner. Mr. Davidge, as Phineas Fletcher, makes a capital Kentuckian; as Topsey, are excellent, and the rest of the cast is well distributed. The piece is so well known that it is unnecessary to enter into particular detail, and when we compliment the actors upon their clever representation and the management upon the skilful production of the drams, including the brightest of scenery and the most correct of appointments, we have said enough to induce all who wish to see the piece once more, or those who have never seen it, to look into the Winter Garden. The beautiful Cubas adds a charm to the evening's entertainment by the bewitching dances, born like her-self of Andalusia, and the fascinations of the dark Senorita are of no insignificant order. WALLACK'S THEATRE.

O'Keefe's rattling comedy of "Wild Oats" was repro-duced for the first time at Wallack's new theatre Monday vening. The cast was admirable. Mr. Lester Wallack enacted the arduous and improbable character of Rover, with his accustomed ability. Mr. Charles Fisher had ne of those impossible sailor parts he acts so well. Mr. Young was a fine Ephriam Smooth. Mr. Seften, as Sims was capital, but too demonstrative. Mr. Blake, we are sorry to say, did not seem to appreciate his part until the play was half over; but he partiy redeemed himself in the last two acts. Mrs. Heap played the Quaker Lady Amaranthe, nicely. Miss Gannon, looking about sixteen years old, noted as naturally as ever. Two minor parts were unusually well represented by Messrs. Parsice and Parkos. The scenery was new and characteristic. The house was large and fashionable, and the play was so excellently acted, so well put upon the stage, and intrinsically as amusing—though lookely constructed—that the appliane was continuous. The only fault of the piece, and, indeed, the common fault of Mr. Wallack's company, is that the neters are too indifferent to each other's drolleries. Perhaps they are too much accustomed to good acting to laugh at it, but their perfect indifference when looking on at a recognition or a recognition of the play. "Will Oat;" will be repeated next week. The "Belie's Stratagem" will be presented, for the first time at this theatre, this evening. Young was a fine Ephriam Smooth. Mr. Sefton, as Sims,

The New Play at Laura Keene's

In the criticism of my play, "The Macarthy," pub-ished in this morning's paper, a great injustice has been lone me. It is there stated that my play is, in fact, Mr. Falconer's, the names only being "altered to avoid the copyright law," &c. Now, after I have put forth the work as my own, this is a serious accusation, and if true would convict me of dishonesty to the public, dishonesty to Mr. Falconer, and, more than all, dishonesty to my principles; for, instead of attempting to evade the copyright law, it has ever been my effort to uphold it, and which has cost me much labor and expense.

But having a cused me of theft, the writer at least The critic describes Mr. Falconer's play correctly have no doubt; but the public, on witnessing "The Ma carthy," will look in vain for a "blind old harpist," the coy maiden," "transported brother," "returned exiie, ""treasonable documents," "betrothed sweetheart," and the viliain who is "eventually shot dead" (a catastrophe which has not yet taken piace in my play to my knowledge). Mr. Falconer's drama was suggested by one of Banim's novels, "The Macarthy" by another, and the sensation scene (which is their only point of resemblance) by a third. My treatment of the latter, however, differs materially from Mr. Falconer's. In explanation of this singular mistake I can only conclude that the critic, being crowded out by the rush, accepted the report that my play was, indeed, Mr. Falconer's. Had he winessed the performance he would have avoided placing binnel'. In so Indicrous a position.

NEWS FROM THE SOUTH PACIFIC.

PANAMA, Feb. 15, 1862.

By the British mail steamer Callao, which reached Panama on the 7th instant, we have advices from South America, dated as follows:—Lina and Callao, January 29; Bolivia, 21st; Chile, 18th, and Argentine Confedora

The news is not stirring, but it is gratifying, for tells us that, for once, peace reigns in every part, from Ecuador to the distant Uruguay. A strong feeling is manifested in all the republics against Spain, which Power is charged with a plan to reconquer all her old provinces; but as none of them have my navies, and all have exhausted their treasuries in civil wars, they are impotent, except for defence.

The Callao did not touch at Guayaquil, so we have no news from Ecuador besides an intimation in a Payta paper that the country is quiet.

Everything is quiet after the excitement of the Presidential elections. It appears that General San Roman has been chosen by the people—fairly or otherwise it is impossible to say. On account of doubt, however, his pertisans have been trying to play their political enamies a new dodgo. They orculated about that Castilla, the President, would not consider the elections legal, and would try to get re-elected bimseif. This dene, said they, the country is lost. These runers were circuisted in the payers, such timil members of the opposition or aboral party came out, on the 24th, with a grand "mani-festation," in which they grant that it is much better to have General Sas Roman for President than General Cas-tilla re-elected, and that they uphold him as their can-didate.

General Rivas, one of the compenious of General Echenique in his last exite, arrived at Callao on the steamer of the same name, but he was not allowed to go on shore. The government of Pore has appointed as Minister Pisnipotentiary near the United States of Colombia, Senor Antonio Gercia y Garcia. Senor Luis Masones replaces Senor Juan Inacio de Osma in England, as Charge d'Allairea and Consul General, this latter gentleman having resigned.

The commercial crisis, which has for so long attnee been making this section its proy, appears at had to be giving way. No failures of any consequence has received quite an increment on account of good harvests and rich produce of the mines.

A new paper is to be started in Valparaise, having for its object time diese soin of political topics.

By special decree earth or sand, for moulds in casting, has been declared duty free.

The question pending between the Chiican government and the Aranco indians has not yet been sat ied. A circumstance has occurred lately which has, franything, retarded negotiati ins. A crazy Frenchman, so it is said, who has been living some time in Chile, suddenly took it into his head to be styled Orellis Antoine, first King of Arancanta. After this he went to Arance, and having get into the good graces of the indians, he tried to persuade them to protein him king. He told them that he had been sont out by the great of the carine were interested in eighboring republic. Some of the carine were in favor of proclaiming him, and some were not. But as all of this was figuring the interests of chile, the government saw fit to take him prisuer. He was taken as he was going to a little village where all the chiefs were to meet him to give him their final answer. The government will probably send him to the limited sayoun in Santingo.

Government has withdrawn the antaidy granted to several papers published in the provinces, supported especially for the object of defending the course of the old administration. The works on the road between Valparaiso and Santingo are carried on with zeal by Mr. Meiggs, the contracter. 1,940 men were actively employed on the line in the month of Docember. The stemmer Maipu, it is said, will soon be sent to the Perivian shores to pick up all Chilean exiles, who, on account of want of means, cannet return home.

The Cabinet has been remodelled, and stands as follows:—Secretary of State and Foreign Affaira, Senor M. M. Salinas; Secretary of Finance, Senor Rudecindo Carbajai; Justice and Public Instruction, Senor M. J. Cortes; Secretary of War and the Navy, General Cledonio Avila.

By a decree issued on the 11th of December the army list has been cut down to 1,731 men.

Amicable relations were being re-established with Peru, and accordingly Senor Rafael Bustos has been appointed Minister Pienipotentiary near the government of that repeblic.

THE ARGENTINE CONFEDERATION.

Generals I erqui and Urrpiza have been obliged to leave the country, together with their satellites.

Urquiza attempted at the last moment to carry off into Uruguay the part of the troops which he had with him. But even these, tired of the despot, left him and acugin protection of the navy which Mitre took from the old government. There were about 200 mers.

From official correspondence between the Chilean government and its Consul at Mondoza, Bussos Ayres, it is plain that that gentleman, Senor J. Godot, was not murdered in that city, as was reported.

A convention of the States is to be called together to frame a purely democratic constitution.
